Heading levels

A section

A section heading is set in large bold type with generous space above and somewhat less below.

A subsection

A subsection heading is a little smaller, and the text that follows it is not indented.

A subsubsection

A subsubsection heading has the size of the text, still in bold.

A paragraph heading A paragraph heading runs into its paragraph, separated from the text by an em of space, which saves vertical room in a long document.

Another section

The second section closes the fixture with a paragraph long enough to wrap onto a second line of text.